THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1863.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

HURRAH FOR 1863!

Wishing you, gentle readers, the compliments of the auspicious festival, we hail the new year with feeling of unusual satisfaction and well founded hope. 1862 is no more, but the genius of History will receive its memory from oblivion; and while we recal with gratitude the services of a long departed friend, we welcome the new-comer as his rightful heir and successor.

New Year's Day is fraught with pleasurable sowvenirs in all parts of Christendom. Paris inaugurates a furor amongst confectioners, and the sums expended on bons-bons within these 24 hours would pay the Civil List of one-half the continental monarchies. Yet this item falls sadlinsky short of the immense values which change hands in the shape of more solid presents, douceurs to poor relations, employees, porters, post men, commissionaires &c. Le jour de l'An is certainly, as its name expresses, the greatest day in the French Calendar.

In Scotland, also, it holds a preeminent rank and the same festivities which Englishmen and Hibernians attach to Christmas Day would seem postponed a week, on the other side of the Cheviots. The aurora of the new year is ushered in with traditional solemnity and the land circles exhibits unwonted enthusiasm on this day. At most of the European Courts a grand levée is held, and congratulatory addresses presented to the potentate of the hour. The commercial world also marks the new era by various changes in partnership &c. and the book-keepers find an unusual amount of labor in making up the transactions of the past year. Amusing fashionable circles a number of balls and galeties succeeds to the retirement of Advent, and our city belles are equally on the look out for new dresses and new admirers.

The custom of New Years Gifts is general in Buenos Aires as else-where, and a number of weddings occurs in this month which the natives prefer, in fulfilment of their proverb "año nuevo, vida nueva"

Looking to political matters, we must remind our legislators that much important business awaits them. Let us not lose time, but rather begin the year with redoubled energy, and carry out some of those enterprises which 1862 has left us as valuable inheritances. The Cordoba railway, Salado navigation, schemes of new colonies, cotton-planting, the Chaco-mue line, and prolongation of the Western to Villa Mercedes, and fly water-works and camp-reform —each and all of these are progressing but confined also, for allowing the two large holes which at present exist in the middle to be in the state they are for the last few days: citizens run the risk of breaking a leg or spraining an ancle by such gross neglect. It really a scandalous shame to think that in such a public place as the mueller, such dangerous spots are allowed to remain without being repaired.—Talking of the Mueller, we have it from one of the best engineers in town that it will not last more than another 5 years; decomposition as already set in, and some of the principal posts are rotting fast.

LETTER'S TABLE.

The news from Europe is rather unfavourable for exporters of R. Plate produce: hides look as if they mean never to recover, and tallow seems to follow suit. A sort of fatality appears to be attached to the saladero business: the saladeristas were just about commencing operations, and trying to make contracts for their hides and tallow, when the French steamer arrives, bringing us heavy market reports. We learn that up the rivers the salad ristas have already concluded contracts, and consequently will not suffer by the decline; but our friends in Barracas, who have to pay one million and a quarter taxes this year, are to be pitied. With the taxium on one side, and a prospect of little market at home, we doubt if even 12 saladeristas will be got to work.

Mr Wheelright was unable to obtain a pas-age in the last steamer, but promises to come with, or follow the next British packet. Many of the London capitalists have promised him their assistance in the enterprise: and we have no doubt if the Government acts liberally, the Cordova Railway will be carried out, notwithstanding all the cold water which has been thrown on it.

Dr Alsina has begun his rural cade. We trust he will not forget to introduce some law or regulation, by which people who have cows or mares, will be obliged to feed them on their own camp. One of the greatest nuisances in the camp is the immunity with which gauchos, who have no stock land to speak of, can afford a good sized cabbage garden, yet keep droves of mares and horned cattle feeding on their neighbour's camp, simply because they have no place else to feed. We know of a case in point, in the partido of Zarate: a strip of land one hundred yards wide by a league and a-half long was occupied by the estancieros on both sides, the property of a widow family was large, and along the whole length of the camp were ranchos; in each of these ranchos lived some of the joint tenant or tennants in common; each family possessed a garden of cabbages, except for one other ostensible purpose then to mix with their neighbour's flocks; besides this, they had each a manada of useless mares, a troupilla of horses, and a few poor cows. It is not to much to assert that, if the estancieros—who were, for the most part, a set of horse tamers, washerwomen, and idle, good for nothing people—if they could be all got together, with their children, horses, mares, cows and criolla sheep, they would hardly find standing room on their own ground. Yet the evils of this subdividing inheritance are sanctioned by law, the people are not to blame. We therefore demand of Dr Alsina that he introduce in his rural code, a rule by which lands for estancia purposes can not, after passing a certain limit, be subdivided, rather that they be sold entire, for the heirs. The cotilier should also see that owners of stock should have sufficient land to feed that stock, without trespassing on his neighbour's property.—Also that every alcalde and teniente alcalde should know how to read and write, and take measures to exter minate the abrojo grande from his barrio.

We have disposed of every grain of our cotton seed, but expect more this month, when we will be most happy to accommodate all those who have come too late for the first supply.

The present state of the public pier or muelle demands immediate attention; cartmen, shopkeepers, &c. are fined for mere trifles: we think if every one had his due, the Capt. of the Port or the redoubtable Chief of Police himself or some of the municipals, should not only be heavily fined, but confined also, for allowing the two large holes which at present exist in the muelle to be in the state they are for the last few days: citizens run the risk of breaking a leg or spraining an ancle by such gross neglect. It really a scandalous shame to think that in such a public place as the muelle, such dangerous spots are allowed to remain without being repaired.—Talking of the Muelle, we have it from one of the best engineers in town that it will not last more than another 5 years; decomposition as already set in, and some of the principal posts are rotting fast.

EUROPEAN MARKETS.

The European markets are so variously represented, that we consider it proper we should give the fullest particulars for the guidance of our country subscribers. We extract the following from a letter written by one of the first Hide Trade Houses in London to one of our leading city merchants:

"Salted hides remain very dull, and although more sales have been effected, there is still great weakness in prices.

"About 40,000 Rio Grande Hides have been placed at 5 3-4 for heavy, and 5 5-8 for light, and a few Buenos Aires at 6 3-4 and 5 5-8. Holders are willing sellers, and would gladly accept lower prices to effect sales of Ba. As hides, which are very dear, in proportion to other descriptions.

"The wool sales began on the 14th inst, and have proved rather a disappointment to importers. There is very little animation, and prices are barely higher than the average of last sales; at least 1d per lb. having been lost of the advance paid between the sales. It is still not improbable that a revival of the demand may take place before the end of the sales.

"Tallow is very dull, and again lower: Bs. Ayres saladero is now worth 34s to 34s 6d.

In Hevre, the public wool sales, in spite of the great wool sales going on in London, were well attended, but the wool market is heavy, and has a drooping tendency, with a reduction of 1 to 2 centimes per kilo, which, if the holders were willing to dispose of, would easily realise current rates. The present stock of Buenos Ayres wool in Havre is 6929 bales, and of Montevideo 1385 bales; the arrivals since the first of the month have been 1406 bales.

The Montevidean wools of all descriptions, and the common wools of Buenos Aires have obtained last months prices, but buyers hold back, and refuse to accede to the pretensions of holders. Wools, no matter how good in bad condition, have to suffer a reduction of from 15 to 20 centimes per kilog. Of the 4854 bales offered for sale, only 645 were sold, the remainder being withdrawn.

In Antwerp, we learn that a lot of inferior merino wool of last year's clip, which cost here $100 the arroba, when ounces were at $400, is still lying in Antwerp, and cannot be sold at a figure which will realise the invoice price. From the circulars which we have received, we extract the following remarks:

"River Plate wools are still in fair demand this week [Nov 22] and some sale have been effected for exportation; the sales of the week have been 400 bales River Plate, and 100 do Odessa. Consumers are at present not buying, having sufficient on hand to keep their manufactories going. Sheepskins, 38 bales have been sold at current rates. The position of the Antwerp wool market is, however, good, and holders are very determination to maintain prices.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

PRINCE OF WALES IN ITALY

A letter in the "Times," dated Naples, Nov. 9, has the following account of the doings of the Prince of Wales. his Royal sister and her consort:—

It is one great advantage of an "incognito" that the Royal Prince is not deprived by his rank of those pleasures which every private gentleman enjoys, and under cover of this mantle our Princes have been waking and driving about during their short visit. The people here have been astonished at their early and sincere habits, for as soon as half past 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning they have been recognised visiting the various coral shops and studies and other places of interest, just as you or I might have done.

On Saturday the Royal party started in eight carriages for Pompeii, where they arrived at mid-day, and entered the silent city by the street of the Tombs. After exploring the house of Diomede and the whole of this in cresting locality they proceeded to the house of the Tragic Poet, the public baths, the street so called of the Two Fountains, and then entered the Forum. The remains, however, were not great, as nothing was found except some bronze hinges and nails, tolerably well preserved, and which the Prince appropriated, with much glee. The princess, too, appeared greatly interested with the operations. Thence the party proceeded to the "Bagni Nuovi," where luncheon was provided. After repairing a short time the Princes were conducted to the western part of the Strada Stabiana, and a very successful excavation was made. An "olla" of bronze, another of clay, and three little "incense" of the same material were turned up, as also the skeletons of three horses, and the remains of some cerpschelli, which the Princess took possession of. In the corner of the room, too, was found a cameo with an engraving.

The next visit was to the amphitheatre, which lies at a short distance from the city, and after examining the lower part the distinguished visitors mounted the seats which run round the ruin, the Prince of Wales being especially active, and jumping the from block to block with all the gaiety of youth.

On Sunday the Prince of Wales attended his majority, and at eight o'clock in the morning all the British vessels of war dressed, except the Osborne, each mast of which, however, was surmounted by a crown of evergreens. No salutes were fired, the incognito of the Prince being preserved, and an obvious respect being paid to the wishes and feelings of Her Majesty. At twelve o'clock the Princes and the Princess of Prussia honoured the London and the Doris with a visit, and the usual pretty spectacle was presented of manning yards. After the return of the Prince to the Osborne salutes were fired as a matter of course. On Sunday afternoon our great promenade, the Villa Reale, is always crowded with a motley company of persons whose occupations prevent them from enjoying themselves during the week, and to be afternoon our Royal Family mingled in the crowd, and walked up to be jetty, returning afterwards to the spot where the band plays, and occupying some of the many hundred chairs which are placed there at two or three grana a head. An English lady who sat near, on seeing the Princess, gave the master of the band a hint, and the Royal Anthem was struck up, but, unaccustomed and unprepared, the performers only got half-way through it. In the evening there was a dinner on board the Osborne which was given by the Prince of Prussia, covers being laid for twenty-four.

"La France" asserts that Russia and Prussia have, in the interests of order, adopted towards Italy a similar policy to that of France.

The French Ambassador to the King of Italy has arrived in Paris. After an interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, he proceeded to Compiègne.

TURIN, Nov. 22 Evening.—The debate in the Chamber of Deputies upon the ministerial policy was continued to-day. Signor Peoglio believed that the difficulties of the situation with regard to foreign policy dated from the resolution of the Chamber, called forth by Count Cavour declaring Rome the capital of the Kingdom.

The "Discussione" of to-day publishes twenty-two telegrams addressed by the Minister Ratazzi to the diplomatic and military agents between May 30 and July 6 last, having for their object to prevent voluntary outbreaks and to oppose any insurrectionary attempts of the Garibaldians.

SPAIN.

The Madrid journals of the 16th announce that the Queen will give a grand dinner on her fete day, the 19th inst., and a ball on the 28th, the anniversary of Prince Alfonso's birth. According to the Diario, M. Mon has given Marshal Prim all the assurance that he entirely approved of the general conduct of the Government, but that he had always been opposed to the re-embarkment of the Spanish troops in Mexico. The Marshal said that the Government of the Queen of Spain had offered to that of France, in case of the Treaty of London being again put in practice, that the Spanish troops should reembark, and commence the campaign, in concert with England. The French Cabinet, says the "Diario," observed that, the honour of its flag being engaged in the expedition against the capital of Mexico, it could not accede to the proposal of Spain.

PRUSSIA.

THE DANISH QUESTION.

Berlin, Nov. 22.

The "New Prussische Kreuz Zeitung" of this evening asserts that Austria and Prussia will shortly submit to the Federal Diet joint propositions in reference to the difference existing between Germany and Denmark. The "Kreuz Zeitung" states that in consequence of the rejection of their proposals in Copenhagen the two Powers consider their charge of the question at an end.

GREECE.

It is stated in a Paris journal that Earl Russell has despatched a circular with reference to the various candidates to the throne of Greece. According to current reports the circular states that while the British Government does not put forward Prince Alfred, it will see no reason to recommend him to refuse the Greek throne in case of his spontaneous election.

It is asserted that the English Minister has communicated his Government with respect to the demonstration taking place in favour of Prince Alfred. The English Government is stated to have replied that the Ambassador should in no way endeavour to influence the election.

The refugees Zimbrakakis, Manos, and Smolentz, have arrived here and have received a brilliant ovation. The elections to the National assembly commence upon the 6th and terminate the 10th December. A great probability of the election of Prince Alfred to the throne has caused some excitement amongst the Greek reign misters. Tranquility prevails throughout the country.

FRANCE AND GREECE.

"La Presse" says it is reported that in a few days the French Government will issue a manifesto upon the Greek question.

Three French ships of war have been ordered to Greece.
